Off-Duty Policeman Finds 'Knifing Victim'

WADING RIVER, N.Y., (Æ) — A guy just can't get a day off, said New York City Policeman William Difeovik.

Here he was enjoying a pleasant drive on Long Island. And there on the road was a body, smeared with blood and the bloody knife lying atop it.

Difeovik dutifully drove to the nearest filling station and called his Nassau County counterparts at Riverhead. A Riverhead policeman rushed to join him at the scene of the crime.

There they found the "body," a 14-year-old Boy Scout from nearby Camp Wauwepex, and four fellow scouts laughing over their joke. It had all been done with catsup.

Difeovik hopped in his car redfaced, and drove back to the city, where blood is blood.

The superintendent of the Boy Scout camp was not amused. He sent his young weekend visitors straight home.
