

HERE TO STAY, Raymond Borg, of Mineola, unpacks his trunk in his tent at Camp Wauwepex, which covers 660 acres of wooded land. Baiting Hollow has 166 acres and accommodates 150 boys each week.

Boy Scouts spend a good deal of time studying books on how to tie knots, build fires and other useful subjects. But their favorite "study" period, and the one that does them the most good, is the time they spend at the Boy Scout camps—Wauwepex at Wading River for Nassau, and Baiting Hollow, for Suffolk.

LAGGING APPETITES are non-existent at Camp Wauwepex where boys from 8 to 17 can spend a week, two weeks or nearly an entire season. Raymond Kraemer, of Williston Park, demonstrates how to make hot dogs disappear.
