ZORRO SINGS HIS CAPTORS TO SLEEP IN "ZORRO'S RIDE INTO TERROR"

With a song, and a jug of wine, Zorro (GUY WILLIAMS) once more outwits his military adversaries in "Zorro's Ride into Terror," episode of Walt Disney's adventure series to be aired _____ at _____ over station _____.

Don Diego (GUY WILLIAMS) has hidden father, Don Alejandro (GEORGE LEWIS) in a secret cave after the proud hidalgo was wounded in an unsuccessful attempt to take over the tyrannical military government. He returns to the hacienda to get medical supplies, but is met there by the revenge-hungry military commandant, Monastario (BRITT LOMOND), who places Diego under house guard.

While his mute servant, Bernardo (GENE SHELDON), slips into the house and out again with the supplies, Diego fills his guards with wine and sings them to sleep. Diego slips into his secret exit, dons the mask and cape of Zorro, and rides to the aid of his father.

The masked man attends Don Alejandro's wounds, takes him to the house of Don Nacho (JAN ARVAN), a friend who will take care of the old man and keep him hidden, then returns to the hacienda. He enters his guarded room dressed as Diego just as Monastario arrives and the guards awaken.

Once again the masked avenger has outfoxed the military in his daring exploits to aid the oppressed.
