UNIFORMS OF "ZORRO" LANCERS

SHRINK TO NEAR-NOTHINGNESS!

Seven husky lancers of Spanish California discovered one morning that their brilliant red and blue uniforms for Walt Disney's "Zorro" TV series, had shriveled to near-nothingness.

This startling turn of events came about when the soldiers had to wade into a tar pit for a scene in the exciting Disney show, "Garcia's Secret Mission," to be aired _____. After their "tarrible" ordeal, the lancers' uniforms were promptly dispatched to the laundry.

Returned to the lancers the next day, the actors and wardrobe men were horrified to find the uniforms had diminished to such a size that they were useful for only the smallest midgets!

A hurried call was sent out to a Hollywood costume firm, and replacements were dispatched as swiftly as possible to the Disney Studio set.

Director Norman Foster rearranged his shooting schedule to postpone the lancers' scenes for one day, while the new uniforms were being readied.
